Fund Manager's Review

Dear Shareholder,

July was a positive month for global equity markets, with most sectors gaining over the period. The more cyclical areas of the market continued their recent trend of outperforming the defensive areas, with IT, Communication Services and Consumer Discretionary gaining strongly. China and Emerging markets soared towards the end of the month as the Chinese authorities pledged to increase policy measures to boost growth, amid waning economic momentum.

After the 0.5% interest rate rise by the Bank of England and a pause from the Federal Reserve in June, US and UK policymakers joined the European Central Bank (ECB) in raising rates by 0.25% in July. The underlying economic data showed that the headline inflation rate continued to ease in the US and Eurozone, with rates at their lowest levels since March 2021 and January 2022 respectively. Second quarter Gross Domestic Product (GDP) growth was also stronger than anticipated, with the US numbers especially resilient in the face of higher rates. The latest UK inflation figures showed a notable downward shift in both the headline and underlying inflation rate, with the readings coming below expectations, after several months where UK inflation had surprised to the upside. This prompted a significant change in the general narrative, that the UK had structurally higher and more sticky inflation than elsewhere. Stepping back from monthly data, it seems that the trajectory for UK inflation is very similar to that in the USA and the EU, though at a slightly higher level and a little later to come down.

There was an almost immediate response in financial markets to the inflation figures, as these reduce the pressure on the Bank of England to keep aggressively raising interest rates. UK government bond yields and sterling, which had both been rising, pulled back down, as interest rate expectations moderated. A lower peak in UK interest rates would have important implications for the UK economy, as it would reduce the peak in mortgage costs and lower other borrowing costs. This change in expectations lifted the stock market, especially the medium and smaller sized companies, which are generally more exposed to the domestic economy than the large multinational groups.

Portfolio performance in July was slightly behind the benchmark with St James's Place the largest detractor to performance. The Net Asset Value total return for July was 1.74%, versus the 2.34% return from the benchmark. Whilst reported numbers and business flows were modestly below expectations, investors were more concerned by the company's decision to lower fees for longstanding clients, who have been with the firm for over a decade. This has lowered future earnings forecasts, though the share price reaction looks harsh and the company remains in a very strong competitive position. After performing strongly year to date, Microsoft dropped slightly from an all time high with earnings results solid rather than spectacular. The long term outlook remains healthy but lacked the AI related tailwinds reported by other technology heavyweights. We had trimmed our position prior to the results to help finance a position in ASML.

The best contributors to performance were in the financial sector. Private markets investment firm Partners Group reported first half inflows that were in line with consensus and the company anticipates stronger fundraising in the second half as the pace of client conversions normalises and several funds are launched in the market. Management reiterated its performance fee guidance and commitment to 10-15% Assets Under Management (AUM) growth in the coming years. Charles Schwab also rose strongly with second quarter Earnings per Share (EPS) better than expected. UK building materials producer Tyman increased by 20% on a positive trading update, benefitting in particular from their considerable US exposure.

During the month, we initiated a position in ASML. The company is the market leader in photolithography equipment, which is the process in which a light source is used to expose circuit patterns from a photomask onto a semiconductor wafer. The company's extreme ultraviolet (EUV) lithology enables semiconductor manufactures to increase the number of transistors on the same area of silicon. Due to the high cost involved of developing this technology, there are huge barriers to entry and the valuation at the point of purchase was reasonable for a company with very high quality earnings and a strong balance sheet. We financed this position from the aforementioned trim of Microsoft and small reductions in Yum China, Munich Re, Itochu, Estee Lauder and Abbvie.

Yours sincerely,

Christian Schneider & Julian Bishop

Risk & Features

Investment trusts are quoted companies listed on the London Stock Exchange. Their share prices are determined by factors including the balance of supply and demand in the market.

The Trust seeks to enhance returns for its shareholders through gearing which can boost the Trust's returns when investments perform well, though losses can be magnified when investments lose value. You should be aware that this Trust may be subject to sudden and large falls in value and you could suffer substantial capital loss.

Changes in rates of exchange may cause the value of investments and the income from them to go up or down.

Past performance does not predict future returns. Investing involves risk. The value of an investment and the income from it may fall as well as rise and investors might not get back the full amount invested. This investment trust charges 70% of its annual management fee to the capital account and 30% to revenue. This could lead to a higher level of income but capital growth will be constrained as a result.

Glossary

Share Price is the price of a single ordinary share, as determined by the stock market. The share price above is the mid-market price at market close.

Net Asset Value (NAV) per Share is calculated as available shareholders' funds divided by the number of shares in issue, with shareholders' funds taken to be the net value of all the company's assets after deducting liabilities.

The NAV figure above is based on the fair/market value cum income of the company's long term debt and preference shares (known as debt at fair value). This allows for the valuation of long-term debt and preference shares at fair value or current market price, rather than at final repayment value (known as debt at par).

Premium/Discount. Since investment company shares are traded on a stock market, the share price that you get may be higher or lower than the NAV. The difference is known as a premium or discount.

Dividend Yield is calculated using the latest full year dividend divided by the current share price.

Gearing is a measure of a company's financial leverage and shows the extent to which its operations are funded by lenders versus shareholders.
