Investment Review

Markets have struggled to make headway in the six months to 31 May 2004. Fears that economic recovery in the United States would falter, given the initially slow pick up in job creation, have given way to nervousness about higher inflation and the pace at which interest rates will need to rise. A volatile background for oil prices and fears of a hard landing for the Chinese economy have also dampened sentiment despite generally encouraging company results in major markets.

In the UK, government spending has kept the economy relatively buoyant, although house price inflation remains a concern. Elsewhere, in the United States higher bond yields already seem to be having an impact on the housing market and bank lending is contracting. Moreover higher oil prices are already squeezing real incomes so the Federal Reserve may not have to raise interest rates as much as the market is currently discounting. In Japan a better functioning Japanese financial system and improving employment has helped boost investment and consumption. The risk remains that a slowdown in the rest of Asia and waning business confidence may undermine capital spending and hiring, and rising bond yields make monetary conditions less helpful. Nonetheless the current indications support the view that a domestic Japanese recovery has finally emerged. Elsewhere in the Pacific, the Australian economy appears to be softening as the property-fuelled consumer boom wanes and the currency weakens.

Although the volatility of oil prices is likely to be a concern for the European Central Bank, rates are unlikely to rise in the Euro bloc while German employment and business confidence continue to weaken. European margins still have scope to expand, and given the relative valuations, a number of European companies look attractive.

The Board has had discussions with the managers as to how to improve the performance of the underlying assets of the Trust bearing in mind the capital structure and the outlook for equity markets. It has been concluded that in the current economic environment a more concentrated portfolio in the UK is appropriate as this should allow the Managers greater scope to achieve superior returns. As a result the number of UK holdings trust has gone from 59 to 38, and the total number of holdings has reduced from 156 to 128. The Board considers that the overall risk profile of the Trust, which has risen as a result of the change, nevertheless remains consistent with the objective of the Trust. There is no change to the investment approach, which aims to focus on quality growth shares.

Looking forward, we expect modestly positive returns from equity markets in 2004 as corporate profits growth in general remains strong. However, concerns over rising interest rates and the risk of further instability in the Middle East are likely to constrain investor enthusiasm and add to volatility. The pace of last year's profits growth may also slow as labour costs rise and financials no longer benefit from low interest rates. This should make stocks with sustainable growth more attractive and highly leveraged companies less so. Key investment themes for 2005 are likely to include a pick up in mergers and acquisitions activity and corporate restructuring, further evidence of a strengthening in the Japanese domestic economy and a recovery in European profit margins.
